BJP blues

As the BJP Builders stepped up the microphone at their 2-day special convention in Margao on Saturday, the party that has dominated politics in the state for more than a decade, went through some tough times. The leadership that had emerged victorious in the recent Goa assembly elections, lost some of its top guns in the recent elections.

The party has lost its majority in the state assembly, after the election of a new speaker, with two Congress legislators switching over to the party. The State Assembly elections are scheduled for 2013, and the BJP is likely to face a tough fight against the Congress and other parties in the state.

In the first place, the party should know that it is a game of "no justice, no peace". While the BJP has been quite unorthodox in its approach to politics, the party that aspires to be the next government in the state, should start playing by the rules of a constitutional government. It is time to realize that the "institutions" are those that are making the rules, not those who are trying to change them.

The party that has been ruling the state for more than a decade, should start thinking about how to create a good image. As much as they want to be called "BJP" for shortening their name, the party needs to start thinking about how to create a good name for itself. At times like these, when so many of its members are being accused of corruption, the party needs to start thinking about how to create a good name for itself.

The party has a number of leaders who are also fighting for the same cause, and they need to start thinking about how to create a good name for itself. The party that has been ruling the state for more than a decade, should start thinking about how to create a good image.
